Temporary shelter for refugees: their makeshift home is in a barracks at the Dong Tam military base.

After the flight from Cambodia, Vietnamese children begin to play again at their temporary home at Dong Tam.

The tides of war and political conflict in South East Asia have swept many helpless civilians back and forth like so much driftwood. Vietnamese refugees from Cambodia have joined the numbers of those whose lives have been violently disrupted by circumstances beyond their control.

The refugees are ethnic Vietnamese who had lived all their lives in what was, according to rather artificially drawn political boundaries, actually part of Cambodia. Events in Cambodia caused some 200,000 of them to decide to abandon their homes and flee to South Vietnam.

They are now housed in about 20 camps scattered throughout South Vietnam. The Vietnamese Ministry of Social Welfare is helping to supply their basic needs—food, shelter, clothing and medical supplies. A.I.D. (the U.S. Agency for International Development) is providing Food for Peace commodities and technical assistance from U.S. refugee advisors, who work closely with the government.

Now life for the refugees will have to be started all over again. For those families who can make their own arrangements there are resettlement programs which enable them to move out of the camps and which give them travel and resettlement allowances.

Neighboring Vietnamese villagers are offering the refugees whatever assistance they can, too. And there's plentiful help in the form of manpower at the camps, from Vietnamese government agencies as well as from U.S. and international voluntary organizations.

Women's Rights Issue Has Fizzled

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With a coalition of women's groups scoring the latest advances of a fickle Senate, the struggle for greater constitutional guarantees against sex discrimination apparently has fizzled in its most promising year.
Leaders of women's rights organizations declared Thursday they'd rather leave things the way they are than settle for Sen. Birch Bayh's substitute for the no-holds-barred amendment that whistled through the House weeks ago.
After the women's news conference, a spokesman for the Indiana Democrat said their failure to support Bayh's last-minute plan to rescue some semblance of the amendment meant, "As far as we're concerned, it's dead."
Bayh originally led what appeared to be an easy fight to pass the House version, but many of the 80 other senators officially listed as sponsors of the measure had second thoughts.

When it became obvious it could not pass the Senate—as it had twice before in years when the House balked—Bayh set out to find a compromise.

The Bayh substitute is the first order of business for a returning Senate next week, but it apparently will be removed from the calendar without protest.

The original version of the amendment reads simply that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

Bayh's proposal calls instead for extending the 14th Amendment's equal protection clause to sex discrimination cases, but also would "recognize the need for a flexible standard in cases where different treatment under the law may be justified."

Women's groups object the added language would prove an excuse to continue discriminatory practices, particularly in employment.

The original version was introduced 47 years ago. In recent times, it was mostly the hostility of Judiciary Committee chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., that prevented it from reaching the full House until this summer.

Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich., won support of two-thirds of her colleagues to force Celler's committee to discharge the proposed amendment for the victorious House vote.

Finding fault with the Bayh substitute Thursday were officials from the National Woman's Party, the National Organization for Women, the President's Task Force on Women's Rights and Responsibilities, the Citizens' Advisory Council on the Status of Women, and the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Bayh originally led what appeared to be an easy fight to have inherited from the days of whist is the discard of a high card to ask partner to lead the suit to you. This works out very well when you can spare the high card. When you can't spare the high card it is just too bad.

With this in mind, various writers have proposed using upside-down signals. Today's hand is taken from the July, 1943, issue of the Bridge World magazine.

West opens the queen of hearts against South's three no-trump. South takes the trick right away and starts on diamonds. West ducks the first two diamonds, but has to win the third.

At this point, if East discards the nine of spades to ask for a spade lead he will get the spade lead. It won't help him, however, since that nine-spade discard will set up declarer's eight as a stopper and he will only collect three spade tricks.

The author points out that an upside-down signal of the deuce would leave East with four spade tricks. There is no question about that conclusion, but it does not mean that upside-down signals are really worth anything.

A good partnership should find the spade shift without any fancy signals. East should play the deuce of hearts at trick one and discard the deuce of clubs on the third diamond lead.
West would see the futility of continuing with his hearts. He would also note that South could hold a perfectly good no-trump without even one honor in spades. After that study West should lead his singleton spade and East would collect five spade tricks to set declarer two tricks instead of just one.

N. Mexico Runs Hot, Cold

By DICK KLEINER

SANTA FE, N.M.—(NEA)—In one day you can easily freeze and bake in New Mexico. The company filming "Shootout" was freezing and, an hour's plane ride away, "Scandalous John" was filming in a desert.

"Shootout" is Henry Hathaway's new western, with Gregory Peck riding tall in the saddle again. They were filming northwest of here, in an area called the Valle Grande beyond Los Alamos. This is the mouth of an extinct volcano and it is a huge, circular area, covered with grass and ringed with mountains.

Hathaway says he was first in this state in '23, when he did a picture with Richard Dix. He has done several films here, including one African story, and says he found the terrain he needed for that one, too.

"Weather is the determining factor on a location," the director said, chewing on his unit cigar. "We had bad weather last week (it snowed) but that was our own fault. We should have started earlier."

Peck rode up and a wrangler held his horse while he talked. They had rigged a rainstorm—water pipes behind the two sheds they had built—and were all set for the scene, but the sun had come out. They were waiting for the clouds to return.

"This ranch," Peck said, "is owned by a lady. I met her. I thought I would give her an impressive figure, so I said to her, 'You must have nearly 10,000 acres here.' And she said, 'It's nearer 100,000, Mr. Peck.'"

Peck doesn't work as

much as he used to. He's very frank about why.

"I get fewer scripts submitted to me all the time," he said. "I'm working less. I'm only doing about one film a year now. But I don't mind it. I doubt if I'll do a picture with Richard Dix. He has done several films here, including one African story, and says he found the terrain he needed for that one, too."

The story of "Shootout" involves a little girl, Dawn Lyn, a seven-year-old charmer, plays the part. She ran over to Hathaway and Peck, clutching a little Indian doll. Hathaway said that she was a great little actress, but also a common woman.

"The other day," he said, "she had to be thrown into some icy water. Afterwards I gave her $10 to buy a doll. She came back with that doll and said it cost $12 and that I owed her $2. So I gave her the $2. Later on, I found out that the doll only cost $6."

Down in the southern part of the state is the fantastic White Sands National Monument, a couple of hundred square miles of pure white sand. (It really is gypsum, not sand, but nobody quibbles.) Here the Disney studio is shooting "Scandalous John," with Brian Keith.

This is something new for Disney—a mature story. It's a G-rated film, or will be, of course, but it's a story with more depth and grown-up meaning than the studio has ever tackled before. It is really a modern version of "Don Quixote," with Brian Keith as an old, addled rancher with an impossible dream.

Out on the sand, the company was burying Keith and Alfonso Arau, who plays the Sancho Panza of the story. They had been caught in a sandstorm with their horses and one mangy steer.

"We have to convince the animals," said producer Bill Walsh, "that they should let us bury them in the sand. I don't think they'll let us."

We walked off into the dunes. The gypsum sand is hard, which makes it possible to bring heavy equipment to the location.

"It's actually cool," Walsh said. "We were lying on it and it's really cool. But this place gets spooky at dusk—the sand glows."

The big problem for the company is not the ground but the air. The area is part of a missile-testing range and every day or so they close the roads for 45 minutes to let a missile fly by. On this particular day, they had a new airborne annoyance.

The Air Force's stunt team, the Thunderbirds, were practicing. We watched them dart across the sky. They were beautiful but when you're trying to shoot a movie, you don't appreciate them.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL TREATMENT
Dear Helen:
A few days ago a friend took three two-month old puppies into the Humane Society because he couldn't find homes for them. He thought they'd be placed.
Less than four hours later, someone called him to tell him about a little girl who wanted a dog, so my friend telephoned the Society—and they said the puppies had already been put to sleep.
The tragic thing is that the woman in charge assured him they would try to find good homes for the animals—and then they were gassed just four hours later!

Helen, does this happen often?

—NANCY

Dear Nancy:

I'm assured by several animal shelters that it doesn't happen often, and shouldn't happen at all unless the dogs are incurably sick. Animals are kept for a specified period—not hours but usually days—and real effort is made to find them homes. Surely this was a mistake! —H.

Dear Helen:

I'd like to add a few words to "Divided's" version of "What are Separated Parents?"

Separated parents are ones that used to love each other and had three children born out of that love, but now only see each other to discuss divorce plans.

It's when your Dad comes over to get his mail and leaves, still burning from the argument he and Mom just had.

It's Dad calling and asking you and your little brother if you have anything special to talk to him about and you answer, "No," knowing that your thoughts and feelings wouldn't change the decision he's already made.

It's having Mom go out and get a job, and coming home from school to an empty house.

It's having people say, "Hey, I saw your father the other day," and you answer, "Oh really?" knowing it's been days since YOU'VE seen him.

In Mexico, breakfast at 10 a.m. means thin corn pancakes called tortillas, beans and coffee.

For most, the main meal comes around 1:30 to 2 p.m. On the table will be stew in tomato sauce, cooked mixtures called moles, soups and tortillas again.

If going out in the evening, expect to be lonesome at a restaurant table before 9:30 p.m. The cocktail hour doesn't start before the stores and offices close at 7 to 8 p.m.

These eating customs are all the more reason for sampling the charms and difference of our neighbor to the south as increasing hundreds of Americans are doing with each succeeding winter season.

Well over 250 plane flights carry passengers from North America every week. Thirteen million passengers landed at the international airport outside Mexico D. F. last year.

Incidentally, that "D. F." stands for "federal district." In the United States, Mexico D. F. is generally referred to as Mexico City though natives ordinarily call it "Mexico," like "New York" (the city) within "New York" (the state).

There are other pleasant methods of journeying into the country in addition to rapid air dashes. Year by year, motoring grows easier. Tourist-aid cars patrol the main roads to give free assistance in emergencies. Highways improve. Everyone in Mexico knows what the phrase "fill 'er up" means. Trailers, following guide books, will find good camps for $2 a day.

Railroads continue to offer a comfortable mode of transportation. Missouri Pacific's Texas Eagle acts as a main

PERSONAL FINANCE

It's generally conceded that the purse is apt to generate more family quarrels than either a husband's roving eye or his wife's bum housekeeping.

There is something about money—and the handling of it—that can strike many a spark in even the most peaceable of households.

The young and optimistic tend to think that the solution lies in more loot. The more experienced have already learned that nirvana is always one step ahead of the paymaster.

Living comfortably within one's income is an art that takes time to acquire. But a good start—according to one counselor who has helped hundreds through financial muddles—is a money-handling system that suits the personalities of those who use it.

He thinks there are four general types of successful money managers:

The President—This guy handles the household like a corporation. He is an advocate of the father-knows-best school of home money management. He invokes the 19th-century prerogative and handles all the money himself. He deposits the pay check in his checking account, writes checks for major household expenditures, and hands out grocery money to his wife in weekly lumps.

He avoids arguments over money by refusing to discuss money. He considers himself fair, but he is also intractable.

The Bookkeeper—In his household, financial democracy prevails. Everybody but the family cat has a bank account. The bookkeeper has his own master account in which he deposits his pay check. He then writes a check to cover groceries and household expenses and deposits it in his wife's checking account.

He issues similar drafts for each child's allowance. Checks for major expenditures such as mortgage payments, insurance premiums and the like are written on the master account. Only the pettiest of petty cash goes unrecorded.

The Coward—The coward simply abdicates all financial responsibility, turning all money matters over to his wife. By accepting this arrangement, the wife then assumes the role of president (see above). She collects the pay check, pays the bills, keeps track of the checking account, computes and pays the income taxes and does out lunch money and allowances as required.

The Compromiser—The compromiser attempts to combine elements from the line into Mexico, carrying passengers funneling into St. Louis on other rail lines. At Laredo, Tex., a taxi ride connects the Texas Eagle with the Aztec Eagle of the Mexican National Railway.

Pot-smuggling dramatics, now being reported from the border, add an air of intrigue to such a border crossing. To avoid delays due to drug-enforcement efforts, travelers are advised to carry any prescription medicines in their original containers to identify them as legal drugs.

Those who enjoy rail travel should investigate the excursion trip on the Chihuahua to Pacific Railroad. On the right-of-way, 73 tunnels and 27 bridges take diesel Pullman or lounge-buffet cars along canyons which rival those of the Colorado, crossing the Continental Divide three times.

Sea travel, with its atmosphere of luxury and relaxation, has been increasing in importance. Princess Cruises from Los Angeles offer 7-day to 14-day expeditions to Acapulco and other coastal resort cities with frequent sailings.

Several other lines have extensive programs, combining cruising southward and flying back north.

Commodore Cruise Line has been the only one operating from the East Coast, carrying passengers from Miami on two-week Mexican excursions via Veracruz.

In a very effective effort to assist potential visitors, the Mexican Tourist Council helps with an annual guide to its country, covering everything. It can be ordered for $3.50 from Mexico Travel Digest, 1100 Glendon Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

three foregoing classifications. In doing so, he manages to muddle through, but just barely. He keeps a checking account, but deposits only a part of each pay check, keeping a sizable amount of cash in his pocket. Both he and his wife write checks against the account, with an occasional overdraft.

She asks him for cash when she needs it. If he has it, he gives it to her.

"Who handles the money, and how, is not the most important point," according to our adviser. "What is important is that either the husband or the wife assume responsibility and that both understand and accept the arrangement. A joint checking account is like the family car; both partners can drive it, but it's up to one to keep the tank full and make sure that it's serviced, licensed and insured."

IRA BERKOW Giants Look UP to 'Little Bit' Murphy

By IRA BERKOW, NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—You notice this fellow in a shrunken San Diego uniform, his number "23" being swallowed up in a tuck of trouser shorts, and his shorts almost meeting his green knee socks so that only a slatch of black leg shows. Calvin Murphy could be a prankish ball boy. He could be a lost clown looking for his circus rattletrap. He could also be the most exciting player in the NBA.

Only his long arms (35-inch sleeve) hint that he has some special physical basketball equipment. Murphy is 5 feet 9, a statement which raises eyebrows in its own right. First, he might really be 5-8, or even 5-7. Second, he plays in a league that considers someone 6-4 a "little man," and the rookie from Niagara is proving that there is indeed a place for him.

Murphy has been averaging over 15 points a game for about 20 minutes work per game, and leads a fast break that sometimes ends up in a one-man dash at the basket. He has scored on a drive off—clean your ear with your pinkie—off Wilt Chamberlain. On a jump ball he has out-leaped John Tresvant, 6-7, forward of the Lakers. In a recent game against the Knicks he was almost called for goal-tending. And he set a pick against powerful Willis Reed for which he was bruised, but not bullied.

"I don't think about the height out there," said Murphy. "If I did I'd faint."

When fans finally focus on him, understand that he is in fact a member of the team, there leaps from throats impulsive cries of joy and encouragement. Patronizing laughter is heard less and less.

"Every town we go into," said Rocket coach Alex Hannum, "Cal immediately becomes the crowd favorite."

If it is hard to identify him with basketball players, it is easier to identify with him as a physical being. If Julius Boros carries the hopes and aspirations of the aged, if Joe Namath is a similar symbol to the youth, then Cal Murphy is demonstrating that a guy of average dimension can thrive in the land of giants.

"You just don't lay dead because some one's bigger than you," said Murphy. "Like in jump balls. I feel if I time the ball right I can get the ball, even if I'm jumping against centers. Sometimes they underestimate you, and that's an advantage."

"So far I've proved that I can get my shot off, off anyone. I've proved that I can play defense effectively. I've proved that I can't be bullied. I've proved that I can play in this league."

"I had confidence in my game, when no one else did. I never doubted my ability."

After he left Niagara, the Harlem Magicians made a $1 million bid for him. He turned them down, due in large part to advice from his friend Willis Reed.

"Willis said that I've played the game seriously and hard for so long, why not see if I could cut it in the heavy action."

Action was heavy, too. Opposing guards tried to back him into the pivot. But his quick, tenacious defense, crawling over guys like a plague of locusts, has discouraged that, to an extent. Team defense with guys like Elvin Hayes helps, too.

Offense is another matter. He may be the toughest guy in the league to guard. Walt Frazier discovered this recently. Frazier, considered the best defensive guard in the league, fell back on his heels once as Murphy dribbled with a stutter-step, put the ball behind his back, through his legs and then hit a 25-foot jump shot.

"I haven't played a guy that small since, well, since grade school," said Frazier. "I just tried to keep him from getting the ball."

Coach Hannum (whom Murphy calls "Mr. Hannum") was trying to explain the success of his minute guard, the guy his teammates call "Midget Man" and "Little Bit."

"He is a man of character, of strength, of determination," said Hannum. "He is, I think, a superman, that's all."

Johnny Sanders is an airline mechanic and lives in Abilene, Tex. Jimbo McConnell and Ron Hill are Californians. Jimbo is an engineer in Victorville. Ron is a grade school teacher in Garden Grove.

But their real specialties are leaning on a hand throttle or flooring the foot pedal of an outboard racing boat. Between them they've cleaned up in the two biggest events in Europe.

Americans don't wait around to find who won the Six Hours of Paris or Berlin's Six-Hour Marathon before they pick their outboard brand, but Europe is different.

When the winners are in from the six hours enduros of Paris and Berlin in late October, he knows the name of the motor he'll buy next spring.

Last year, Renato Molinari from Italy drove a tunnel-hull designed by his uncle to beat Sanders by 11 seconds, and Mercury sales also soared into the lead. This year, Sanders completed 441 miles during the six hours on the Seine to set a new record average of 73.5 m.p.h. and beat Renato by five miles. Sanders' 17-foot Molinari hull was powered with the Johnson outboard Stinger, rated 115-plus horsepower but probably souped up 50 per cent over that.

Sanders, at 35, is the first American ever to take the Paris classic. Raced on the narrow river in the center of the city, the event churns up waves that bounce back from stone walls in a hull-crushing mix while big river barges plow through the middle of the 85-entry contest. Straightaway speeds neared 100 m.p.h. this year for the single-outboard flyers, and only 44 lasted the 360 minutes.

Jimbo McConnell crashed into a barge and left his boat at the bottom of the river, but teamed with Ron Hill at Berlin the next weekend to lead all the way and win with an Evinrude Starflite SS, also rated at that 115-plus horsepower. He beat Molinari by five minutes while inboard dragboat Dick Nordskog from Van Nuys, Calif., tried outboards and finished third.

Happiest boatman around was probably ex-racing driver Charles Strang of Waukegan. Head engineer at Outboard Marine, makers of Johnsons and Evinrudes, he saw his drivers beat out Mercury, the company where he had been head engineer before.

Free advice is the worst thing you can take for a cold.

The treasurer just walked by, grumping that, considering the state of the office, he'd better go and make out the payroll.

motor racing event is not the Daytona 500, stock car racing's major production, but the Indianapolis 500 (Indy received 113 first-place votes against 54 for Daytona and seven for the U.S. Grand Prix).

The editors were also asked which races would they cover if they could only select a few. The 500 was again the clear winner, with the Daytona 500, Darlington, Grand Prix, California 500 and the drag racing nationals at Indianapolis following.

Interestingly, the California 500, which was run for the first time last Labor Day at the new $22 million Ontario Motor Speedway, has already established itself as a "must-see" tradition, which should please the Ontario management.

A majority of the respondents believe that press facilities at racing events were below average. Seventeen said they were "the worst" of any sport.

The Dodge survey apparently did not include motorcycle racing.

The orbit of a planet forms an ellipse or conic section.

By BOB COCHNAR
NEW YORK — (NEA) — What "Grand Prix" did for Formula 1 racing and what "Downhill Racer" did for skiing, "Little Fauss and Big Halsy" does for motorcycle racing.

When a bike ridden by Michael J. Pollard, of all people, (Joe Namath isn't the only novice risking his hide in motorcycle movies) snarls through the dust and the opening credits, viewers know that they are in for some authentic action. And they are not disappointed.

According to the production notes for the Paramount film, which stars Robert Redford, "All scenes were filmed at real locales—homes, stores, restaurants, raceways in southern and northern California and in Arizona. Shooting was done in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Phoenix, in and around the Ramada Inn in Burlingame and in smaller towns like Lancaster, Rosemont, Willow Springs and Beeline."

To give audiences a sense of participation, cameras were placed on special mounts attached to the motorcycles. Then stunt riders joined the pack of bikes and filmed the high-speed sequences at close range. A tape recorder caught the sounds.

Although the life styles of professional bike drivers may not be as sordid and tacky as those offered in "Little Fauss and Big Halsy," you do get an idea of the wearisome race-to-race commuting which is part of the game. You also see how ugly vast areas of the country have become.

And the action, from hill climbs and scrambles to road racing on closed courses, is enough to impress anyone with the courage and total commitment of the professional rider.

There is, it is clear, no margin for error.

Being dumped onto gravel or into a wall at 150 m.p.h. is not much fun. There is a good deal of dumping going on and even leathers designed by Pierre Cardin don't offer much protection.

Redford is probably not your typical motorcycle rider, but no matter. He isn't your typical skier either ("Downhill Racer"). The girls don't care.

In a recent survey of newspaper, television, radio and magazine sports editors and writers conducted by the Dodge boys, it was determined that the vast majority of respondents feel that stock car racing is of greatest interest to their readers and listeners. Here are the raw figures:

'Spaghetti Joe' Spagnola Learned Game Quickly

(Editor's Note: One of a series on the top quarterbacks in college football.)

TEMPE, Ariz. — (NEA) — Joe Spagnola is a motorcycle-riding, mod-dressing, native of Pratola Serra, Italy, via Caracas, Venezuela, and East Paterson, N.J. He's also a sensational quarterback for the Arizona State University Sun Devils, who are on their way to one of their best seasons ever.

During the season, much to the chagrin of Coach Frank Kush, Joe cavorts around campus on a motorcycle—a habit he picked up from another cyclist, his offensive coach, Don Baker. Recently, he walked into the football office wearing a fluorescent pink Panamanian hat decked out with an orange T-shirt and pink and orange bermudas. When asked why the hat, Joe replied, "To keep the sun out of my eyes."

At the fall football camp near Payson, Ariz., the Devils were enduring floods and continuous rainfall. Everyone had raincoats on. Joe tackled the storm in his swimsuit.

Joe might still be living in Pratola Serra, a suburb of Naples, if it weren't for his enterprising father. "Jobs were scarce when I was born," says Joe, "so my father went to work for an American oil company in Caracas. We lived there for a year, then moved back to Italy.

"When I was eight, my father took a job in East Paterson, N.J., as a factory worker. He sent for us to move to America. I had my ninth birthday on the boat."

When Joe got here, he obviously didn't speak English but he was stuck in the grammar school system anyway. "They put me back a grade until I learned the language and that took 18 months before I could talk fluently," says Joe, who still speaks Italian on the home front.

It was in East Paterson that a football and "Spaghetti Joe," as he is called, came together. He played it in the streets until high school and showed up as a split end on his freshman team. "They needed a quarterback and picked me," says Joe, who still hasn't figured out why, and he's been there ever since. He missed seven games of his senior year with a knee injury but still was impressive enough that ASU, Penn State, Memphis State and Brown University all offered him football scholarships.

"He does a great job of picking apart defenses," says Kush. "We work on audiblinging a lot and Joe is excellent at it." Said Joe: "We spend countless hours working on recognizing defenses. It's a game we play with the opposition. They go there, we move here."

Spagnola apparently has been going in the right direction. Darrell Royal of Texas said on national television earlier this year that, when checking a quarterback, note the won-loss record, not the statistics. Of senior quarterbacks at major colleges with three years' starting experience, Joe ranks second with an 84.3 win percentage. This year, he has passed Arkansas' Bill Montgomery and trails only Rex Kern of Ohio State, who has lost only once.

Not bad for a man who, 10 years ago, knew "football" only as soccer and couldn't even converse in English—not even to the point of calling a straight dive play.

Dotty Fothergill vs. The PBA:

By MARTY RALBOVSKY

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Being rated the best woman bowler in America may be pleasing to the ego, but so far it has done little to fill even the most petite of pocketbooks.

Dotty Fothergill has been the best woman bowler in the country the last three years, yet she has made less money for all her victories than Don Johnson did last spring when he won a single tourna ment—the Tournament of Champions—and $25,000.

So Dotty, 25, 5-foot-2, 105 pounds and lefthanded, filed an application to join the Professional Bowlers Association Tour, which has been known to reward 20th-place finishers with checks for $1,000, the same amount she was winning for finishing first in one of the infrequent women's tournaments.

The PBA rejected her application on the grounds she did not meet their qualifications (she hadn't bowled in a sanctioned league in three years, for one thing) but carefully avoided any mention of her sex. Dotty, meanwhile, has been saying that the PBA's reasoning is a lot of chauvinistic fine print, and the real reason she was rejected was precisely because of her sex.

The PBA, she believes, doesn't want a woman on its tour, even if she is the best woman bowler in the country and better than some of the men. So Dotty hired a lawyer, and he filed a $2.5 million lawsuit in Common Pleas Court in Akron, contending that the PBA is depriving her of making a sufficient living as a pro bowler because she is a woman.

The PBA is preparing its legal answer and some time before the $77,777 Showboat Invitational Tournament in Las Vegas the court will decide whether or not another frame will be added to the game.

"The thing that has disturbed me most in all of this is the thinking of the touring pros," said Dotty, a native of North Attleboro, Mass. "I've talked to a lot of them about the situation and, in some cases, I might as well be talking to a brick wall. Others listen to me and nod their heads and try to be sympathetic. But I know what they're thinking. They're thinking I'm crazy."

"A lot of pros have told me, 'Now listen, Dotty, if it were only you it wouldn't be bad at all. But if you get in, how many other women are going to try to do the same thing?' It would be some mess if we had a couple dozen girls on the tour with us. What would we tell our wives?" And I tell them, "What do you tell your wives about the girls who travel the tour now and don't bowl?"

"Other pros tell me, 'Dotty, having a woman on the tour is going to create all kinds of problems. How are you going to dress in the paddock with all the rest of us? We're going to have to spend all kinds of money getting separate facilities for you.' I tell them, 'I don't have to dress in any paddocks, and I'm a big enough girl now to take care of myself.' It's all a lot of nonsense."

Dotty already has beaten many of the PBA's top money-winners in exhibition matches. Among her victims were Jim Stefanich (by 115 pins), Dick Weber (by 105), Billy Hardwick (by 113) and Dick Ritger (by 79), all in three-game sets.

The one thing Dotty has avoided mentioning in her cause is Women's Liberation. She does not have Betty Friedan or Bella Abzug waiting in the wings for vocal support, nor has she read a single line of Kate Millet's "Sexual Politics" for moral support. Her campaign has not been dramatized by a single charred and smoldering brassiere.

"Funny thing is, I don't have the support of too many women," said Dotty. "Women bowlers are peculiar. You're one of them until you get real good. Then they drop you. They're not afraid of your ability like men are, but they're envious. That's why I stopped bowling in women's leagues. I didn't have too many friends after awhile."

Churchill Film to Be Produced

LONDON (AP) — American producer Carl Foreman has announced plans to make a film on Winston Churchill's childhood and early manhood, to be called "The Young Churchill."

Foreman said Monday British star Richard Attenborough would direct. The British youngsters to play Churchill as a child and as a youth are yet to be selected.

Foreman added that an American actress would portray Churchill's American mother, Jenny Jerome.

Singer's Wife Seeks Divorce

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Myra Lewis has filed suit for divorce from pop singer Jerry Lewis, saying in her petition their life together had "become a nightmare."

Mrs. Lewis, 26, filed the action Monday. Lewis is 34. Lewis and Myra, his cousin, were married in 1958 when she was 14.

Explosion on Louisiana Coast Oil Rig

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Humble Oil and Refining Co. officials here said an explosion on an oil rig off the Louisiana coast Friday night injured 14 persons.

A spokesman said the accident occurred on a rig 27 miles south of Grand Isle, La., in the Gulf of Mexico.

Tax-exempt Law Firms Under Investigation

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With a Senate probe looming, the Internal Revenue Service moved today to decide the fate of tax exemptions for a new breed of charitable organizations—public interest law firms.

IRS Commissioner Randolph W. Thrower called a news conference to announce the ruling, cutting a 60-day timetable for review of the question almost in half.

Thrower announced Oct. 9 the IRS had stopped granting tax-exempt status to public interest law firms pending a two-month study.

He said such firms had become a new American phenomenon, setting up to file lawsuits in such public-interest matters as consumer protection and the environment.

The announcement touched off a flurry of criticism, and a Senate subcommittee headed by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said it would investigate. Hearings are set later this month.

The IRS backed down partially on its earlier announcement, allowing contributions to such firms to remain tax deductible pending the study.

But Thrower said in a speech at Atlanta Oct. 16 that "Probably nothing could be more damaging to the interests of the conservationists than for us to approve proposals that might lead to abuses, which in time might damage the cause of all."

Among those attacking the IRS was Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., who said in a letter to Thrower that lifting the tax-exempt status of such firms would be "a direct government intrusion in and limitation upon legal advocacy."

"In effect," Ervin said in the letter Oct. 29, "the IRS is imposing a tax on the exercise of a First Amendment right."

The Senate subcommittee which will hold the hearing asked for a public explanation of the original suspension, saying the IRS was threatening to cripple hundreds of organizations working in the public interest.

IRS officials bristled over the criticism, saying its first announcement merely was an effort to study the matter in hopes of establishing sensible guidelines.

150 Students Out for Year

WABBASEKA, Ark. (AP) — Joe Simpson, superintendent of the Wabbaseka School District, says about 150 Negro students in grades 7-12 have been officially suspended from Hocker High School here for the remainder of the school year.

The students have been participating in protests and boycotts of the district's schools. Simpson had warned the students to return to class last week or be expelled. About 15 students returned to class.

The 150 students were part of a broader boycott endorsed by a group of parents who have said they will not send their children back to Wabbaseka schools until the school administration answers their grievances over alleged discrimination.

DE GAULLE AND THE PRESIDENTS

His stature and durability as a world figure was nowhere more evident than in Charles de Gaulle's association with U.S. presidents going back to World War II and Franklin Roosevelt (lower left, with daughter Mrs. Anna Boettiger) who refused to recognize De Gaulle's Free French as a government in exile. But De Gaulle returned to Washington as provisional president of liberated France to meet Harry Truman. A wartime relationship was revived when De Gaulle returned to power in 1958 as the Eisenhower administration neared its end. In an era of summits, the soldier-presidents met several times, as (bottom left) with Britain's Macmillan and West Germany's Adenauer.

Hopes for a new era in Franco-American relations with the Kennedys' arrival on the scene did not materialize. Although Presidents Johnson and De Gaulle met several times, relations deteriorated throughout the '60s. Improvement was a prime foreign policy goal of President Nixon, whose Paris visit was the high point of a post-inaugural European tour, but his return to power unexpectedly coincided with De Gaulle's final departure.

Seeks Lower Fares for GIs on Leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is trying to arrange cut-rate fares for American servicemen traveling from Vietnam to the United States under a new liberalized leave policy.

In addition to saving them money, this would help U.S. servicemen get around a scarcity in leave travel space available on military aircraft.

As it now stands, the space problem could severely limit the number of men taking advantage of the 14-day-at-home leave program announced earlier this month and effective next Monday.

The two-week leave would be in addition to the five to seven days of rest and recuperation—of which are granted to all men during their one-year duty tour in the war zone.

However, the 14-day home leave is not automatic.

Under the regulations, no more than 10 per cent of the men assigned to a given major unit or base can be absent on leave at any one time.

Also, whether a man may go on leave when he chooses to do so could hinge on such military considerations as whether his unit is engaged in some important operation.

When a serviceman goes on R&R from Vietnam, his transportation to and from such places as Hong Kong, Bangkok and Hawaii is furnished by the Defense Department.

But when he goes on what is called "ordinary leave," as under the new policy, he normally has to make his own arrangements.

Militant Named Honorary Queen

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Black militant Angela Davis, facing kidnap and murder charges, has been elected honorary homecoming queen at Sacramento City College.

Miss Davis, 26, is held in a New York jail in connection with a Marin County shootout Aug. 7 which killed a judge and three other persons.

The honorary queen title was bestowed by the 23-member student executive senate of the two-year community college. The vote was 12 to 3 with 8 abstentions.

Mauri Priest, student body president, said the vote only "represented the decision of 23 students on the student senate," not the position of the school's 8,200 students.

Thurmond Lashes His Hecklers

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., had a lively exchange with hecklers at the University of California campus here as he continued his Southern California speaking tour.

Several hundred students jeered the 67-year-old senator Wednesday as he urged support of President Nixon's policies.

One student asked how it felt "to know that you're going down in history as one of the biggest bigots and racists of our time."

"At least I will be loyal to my country," snapped Thurmond. "At least I will treat all the people with manners which is more than you are doing."

Complaints Dismissed as Hogwash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has dismissed as hogwash complaints about Republican campaign tactics. If any mistake was made, he said, it was "that we undersold our message."

Agnew, the administration's hard-line campaigner, said Republicans nationally accomplished their overriding and critical election-day objective by improving President Nixon's "precarious position in the United States Senate."

The vice president, talking to a GOP fund-raising dinner Thursday night, said Nixon will be two to four votes better off in the new Senate, and that "is a parliamentary revolution."

Republicans actually gained two seats in the Senate while losing nine in the House, where, Agnew noted, the average off-year loss to the party of a president has been 37 seats.

"In the 92nd Congress, President Nixon will fare better on foreign policy, better on national defense, better on crime and law and order, and at least somewhat better on fiscal responsibility," Agnew said.

"That's the nub of Election 1970. No thinking Republican should let professional detractors in or out of office brainwash him into thinking otherwise."

Agnew said he wished Republicans could have won more. He said he was sorry at the GOP loss of statehouses—Democrats gained 11 governorships.

But, he said, "in sum, I feel satisfied" the party and the administration "did all that could have been fairly expected."

Naval Chief Shaking Up Tradition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., youngest man to become chief of naval operations, is shaking up the Navy with a stream of decrees changing traditional ways of naval life.

Since taking over July 1, Zumwalt, 49, has peppered commanding officers with dozens of directives whose objective can be summed up in this sentence from one such message:

"No other problem concerns me as deeply as reversing the downward trend of Navy retention rates and I am committing myself to improving the quality of Navy life in all respects and restoring the fun and zest of going to sea."

Included are such unorthodox ideas as appointing official spokesmen to present complaints of Navy wives and encouraging shiphanding competition among junior officers—even if it means scrapes and dents.

Zumwalt's plans coincide with the Nixon administration's goal of a totally volunteer armed force.

The four-star admiral's associates say there's been some grumbling from Navy captains and commanders.

But they claim general acceptance, perhaps because Zumwalt is going to bases around the country to explain his thinking and to listen to gripes.

Many of Zumwalt's orders authorize improved promotion opportunities, broadened leave privileges and relaxed restrictions on such practices as enlisted men wearing civilian clothes when off duty at shore bases.

Zumwalt has acted to improve Navy exchanges and commissaries, establishing customer relations boards that include representatives of minorities and enlisted family men.

He has encouraged special ceremonies to mark a sailor's re-enlistment and has tried to ease the work burden of some of his men by reducing paper shuffling.

He urged his commanders to improve the comfort of quarters assigned to bachelor officers and enlisted men, including the installation of beer vending machines.

For commissioned officers, Zumwalt directed that, at least once a week, commanding officers "invite selected groups of young ladies without escorts to visit the mess."

Wolfson Wins an Appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — Financier Louis E. Wolfson, whose association with Abe Fortas led to the latter's resignation from the Supreme Court in 1969, has won an appeal of a conviction of perjury and conspiracy to obstruct an investigation of stock transactions.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals directed Wednesday that Wolfson, 57, be given a new trial.

Wolfson already has served nine months in a federal honor camp on conviction for selling unregistered securities.

Youths Told Teaching Field Not Critical

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says young people, especially women, planning on becoming teachers in the 1970s should think instead about jobs in other fields.

In a once-in-a-decade forecast released Tuesday, the department noted the dwindling demand in education, a field entered by two out of three women college graduates in the past, and warned those who pursue that aim could wind up in unemployment lines.

But, the report said, state and local governments will offer 52 per cent more jobs by 1980, services and professions 40 per cent more, construction 35 per cent, finance, insurance and real estate 24 per cent, trade 23 per cent, manufacturing 11 per cent, and transportation, communication and public utilities and the federal government 10 per cent each.

Mining jobs will fall 9 per cent and agriculture 23 per cent.

The document said the elementary and secondary teacher job decline will bottom out by 1973. But it stressed that applications could increase even as jobs dwindle unless young people recognize the slackening demand.

"The situation calls for careful appraisal in making career decisions," it said.

"The outlook particularly suggests broadened career opportunities for women."

The department's forecasts, in the form of a graph-packed, 28-page booklet called "U.S. manpower in the 1970s," will be distributed to 100,000 leaders in business, labor and education in the hope of prompting private-sector planning for coming changes.

Pilgrimage to Grave of de Gaulle

PARIS (AP) — Ten African presidents and two Soviet officials made a pilgrimage today to the grave of Charles de Gaulle in the village cemetery of Colombey les Deux Eglises.

The African leaders were paying their private homage to the man who gave their countries independence from colonial rule. The Russians—Deputy Foreign Minister Semyon Kodzyrev and Marshal Vassily Tchouykov—paid tribute to the statesman who worked to build bridges between East and West.

De Gaulle's home village in eastern France sank back into its rural lethargy, littered with the debris left by 50,000 mourners who packed it Thursday for the former president's simple funeral. After the burial, thousands filed past the plain marble grave where De Gaulle lay next to his daughter Anne.

The crowds went home in the early evening.

Two policemen stood guard at the grave through the night. The lights were out in the De Gaulle residence, La Boisserie.

In the French capital, hundreds of thousands of Parisians marched silently in pouring rain up the Champs Elysees to the Arc de Triomphe and the tomb of the unknown soldier beneath it. They were the plain people of Paris, answering the City Council's call to pay homage to the hero of the World War II liberation.

The broad avenue was filled from the Rond Point to the Etoile, and officials estimated there were as many as 500,000. The march lasted about an hour, but some stayed on to keep a midnight vigil at the arch.

By today, more than 26,000 persons had signed rolls of honor at the offices De Gaulle maintained in Paris.

The monarchs, presidents, premiers and other world leaders who came to Paris for the memorial service in Notre Dame Thursday went home after a reception given by President Georges Pompidou at the Elysee Palace.

During the reception President Nixon talked briefly with Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny. White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the conversation was "very animated" and consisted of such pleasantries as "I give my best wishes to you and your people."

Rice Reports Disturbing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., saying he is disturbed by rumors that the Agriculture Department may propose new cuts in the rice allotments for the next crop year, has asked for a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin.

Alexander made the request in a telegram to Hardin Thursday.

"It is rumored that the U.S. Department of Agriculture proposes additional cuts in rice acreage for the ensuing crop year," the telegram said.

"Based on available information this is totally unjustified. I request a meeting with you prior to any decision on this matter. With general economic conditions already in a state of sustained recession, the rice producers cannot live with additional cuts in acreage."

Rice acreage allotments were cut 15 per cent for the past crop year.

The general reduction in the prime rate followed by two days a cut in the discount rate to 5½ per cent from 6 per cent. The discount rate is the interest charged by the Federal Reserve Board to member banks.

Girl to Get Picture of Foster Parents

TUCKER PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP)—Georgia Pavlidaki, the 11-year-old Greek girl living on the island of Crete, will get her wish—a picture of her foster parents, the 300 inmates at Tucker State Prison Farm.

Georgia had written to the prison last week asking for a picture of her foster parents, but the inmates did not know how they could meet their "daughters" request because of difficulty in getting the inmates together.

A Little Rock television station, KTHV, solved the problem. The station planned to send a camera team to the prison Friday afternoon to shoot pictures of the inmates and have the film sent to Georgia.

The inmates "adopted" Georgia almost two years ago and have voted to continue their $192 yearly support until she reaches the age of 18.

She is supported from the Inmate Welfare Fund, which consists of profits from the inmate store. Originally the inmates donated the needed money with some even selling their blood to contribute.

The program was initiated by James Dean Walker, 30, who said he wanted to begin the program because he felt that some of the inmates would not have been at Tucker if someone on the outside had cared. Walker is serving a life sentence for the slaying of a North Little Rock policeman.

The inmate newspaper said, Georgia was adopted because the inmates "decided to help set a person free from bondage. No elaborate escape scheme was involved, but rather a plan showing love, kindness and concern for someone less fortunate than even the inmates themselves."

Hartke Seems to Be Winner in Indiana

By DALE BURGESS
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sen. Vance Hartke led Roudebush by 4,482 votes in an interim tabulation of the Indiana Senate race announced today by Secretary of State William M. Salin.

Salin's figures, based on mailed returns from the state's 92 counties, gave Hartke 871,089 votes to Roudebush's 866,607.

By today, more than 26,000 persons had signed rolls of honor at the offices De Gaulle maintained in Paris.

The monarchs, presidents, premiers and other world leaders who came to Paris for the memorial service in Notre Dame Thursday went home after a reception given by President Georges Pompidou at the Elysee Palace.

Truck Driver's Son Honored

LONDON (AP) — George Brown, a truck driver's son who became a deputy prime minister and foreign minister of Britain, has entered the House of Lords as Baron George-Brown of Jevington.

Brown was made a life peer after the defeat in June of the Labor government he helped to lead.

Settlement Near on GM Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Near settlement of the eight-week-old general Motors strike and an easing of interest rates during the past week appeared to set the stage for an upturn in the economy.

At the same time, however, the terms of the new GM contract as well as wage recommendations for the nation's railroads during the past week raised speculation that the country was in for yet another round of inflation.

Capital spending by business should get a mild stimulus from a cut in the prime lending rate to 7½ per cent from 7½ per cent, the rate since Sept. 21. The prime rate is the interest charged by commercial banks to their most creditworthy customers—usually businesses.

The general reduction in the prime rate followed by two days a cut in the discount rate to 5½ per cent from 6 per cent. The discount rate is the interest charged by the Federal Reserve Board to member banks.

Under the new contract between General Motors, the world's largest manufacturer, and the leadership of the United Automobile Workers, wages would increase about 20 per cent over the next three years, not allowing for inflation protection.

This increase, said Earl Bramblett, chief GM negotiator, was "substantially more than the anticipated increase in productivity of the country"—which averages 3 per cent a year.

A 32.5 per cent boost in wages over three years was recommended by a presidential panel investigating a dispute between the nation's railroads and four unions.

Paul W. McCracken, the President's chief economic adviser, said wage raises far in excess of productivity could be the major obstacle blocking the economy's return to full employment.

"If we insist on paying ourselves more, the result is bound to be some combination of rising prices and unemployment through lost markets," he said.

While settlement of the GM strike may raise the prospect of more inflation, it also promised to revive the sagging fortunes of countless suppliers.

In the steel industry, for example, a prompt end to the strike reportedly would add more than a million tons to 1970 steel shipments.
